

Pigmentation and Uneven Skin Tone

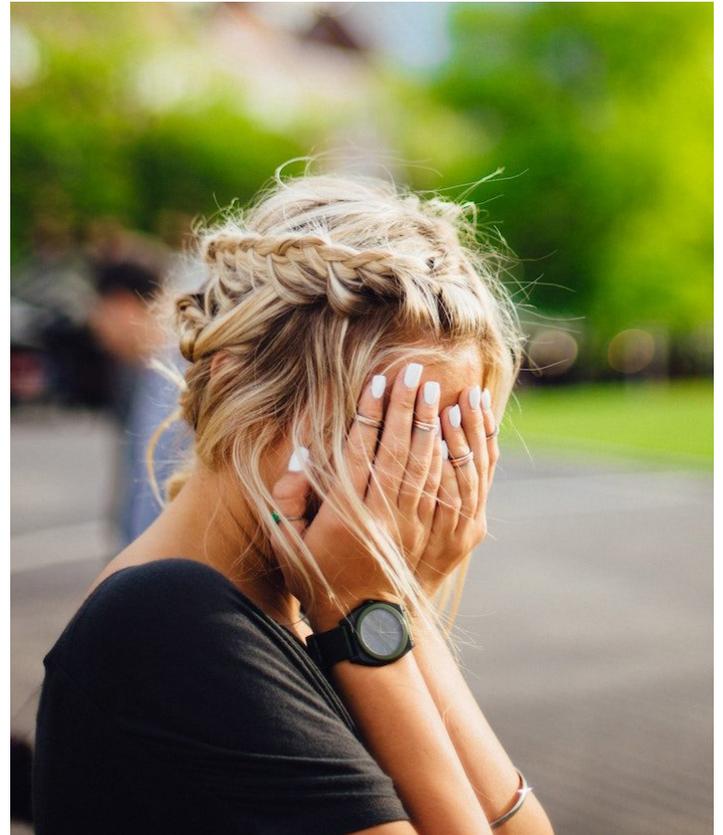

Which products are best for your skin?

Finding the specific products for your uneven skin tone and pigmentation

Pigmentation is very complex and your vigilance will be needed to control it for as long as it is a problem for you. You are unlikely to maintain results, or even achieve them, by just using one product designed to treat pigment. It needs to be a multi-faceted approach.

Therefore, the suggested products below need to be slotted into an existing skin care regime including cleanser, antioxidant serums, growth factor serums, Vitamin A serums and moisturisers-SPF's. You will get quicker, more long-lasting results if your skin is well hydrated and nourished and you look after your gut health. A lot of pigmentation is hormonally induced and this is significantly influenced by your gut biome.

Generally, treatment and nourishing serums are used in conjunction with a Vitamin A serum and applied at night. It is advisable that you are using a Vitamin C serum every morning.

Pregnant and breast-feeding women should discuss using pigmentation products with their Dr prior to purchase. The emphasis for you should be on using no-nasties products with lots of hydrating, nourishing antioxidant serums and creams.

However, there is one product you can add to your regime whilst pregnant or breastfeeding that will help control pigment/melasma if your skin is so inclined:

Which products are best for your skin?

Specific products formulated for best results - even skin tone, reduce skin discolouration and minimise pigmentation:

If you have sensitive/reactive skin, please read our article here and we suggest you spend a few weeks improving your skin and decreasing the sensitivity prior to commencing any of these products.

Choose one of the products below, then incorporate it into your everyday regime. It is imperative that you use a UV blocker - every day!

- CosMedix Elite X-Cell – this is our recommendation to replace the Skin Medica Lytera, which is now no longer available
- Osmosis MD Enlighten - best used as a spot treatment under Osmosis MD Rescue Serum with Osmosis MD Catalyst AC-11 used every morning as your antioxidant (this is our fave). You may not need the Enlighten after 1-2 bottles (6-8 months).
- CosMedix Simply Brilliant
- Aspect Dr Complete Pigment Serum – suitable for pregnant and breast feeding women
- Organic Nation Enlighten3 Skintone Serum - will control your oil as well

Remember, these serums are all medical grade, professional, clinically proven products which treat the underlying cause of your brown areas and spots. They are not simply brightening, lightening agents. Having said that, although they are effective, they are also safe.

The best in-clinic treatments are laser, IPL and Vitamin A infusions when your skin is ready for them. Enjoy your results!

Osmosis MD Catalyst AC-11

Using this serum was the first time I saw noticeable changes in my skin - it's reverse ageing in a bottle!

I regularly receive skin treatments to address my pigmentation problems and using a multitude of Osmosis products has helped maintain my results. It's also assisted in smoothing my skin and looks more radiant too.

Don't let the price deter you - it is worth every cent.

Don't forget, you receive $15 off your first order!
